Gambling businesses are required to report payouts they made that meet certain thresholds, according to the IRS.

Similarly, the coworker who organized your office March Madness bracket pool is unlikely to send you and the IRS records of your participation.

In addition, you won’t be able to write off gambling losses unless you itemize your deductions.

If your gambling losses, combined with all your other deductions, don’t reach at least this number, you might not want to write off those bad bets.
