There are two ways to go about doing this: Collect It Yourself
Use Data Available Online

If that sounds like a daunting task to you there is also the option to use data available online!

An example of this would be OddsJams Industry plan! This plan gives access to arbitrage bets with alerts, +EV bets with alerts, middle opportunities with alerts, AND a pre-computed perfect line to compare the book lines to.

In the end it is really all about what works for you as long as it DOES work.

Here are some examples of types of betting models: Regression Analysis

There are actually a couple famous examples of using regression analysis.

This data seems to also be true since over 75% of past Superbowl champions have had passing efficiency of more than a yard per attempt.
